

Through the eyes of God

- He saw the earth when it wasn't and He gave it shape.
- He saw the darkness that was upon the earth and He gave it light.
- He saw the nakedness of the earth and gave it grass, trees, herbs and flowers.
- He saw that the earth needed more life and created the animals and the birds; the fish and all creatures that crawl.
- He saw that it all needed a caretaker. He saved the best for last and made Adam, a man who looked just like Him.
- He saw that the man was lonely for a species of his own and lovingly put the man to sleep and out of Adams body He created a woman named Eve.
- He saw Adam and Eve each evening as He met with them in the garden. He talked with -them about life and warned them about the one whose intent was to destroy all whom He loves. He showed them a tree that was off limits for them; off limits for their own wellbeing. The only place in the garden where their lives would be forever changed for the worse if they chose.
- He watched as Eve wandered off one day and met the tempter by the tree; He watched her eat the fruit the tempter offered and it tasted oh so good; for a while.
- He watched as Adam sought his wife and she became the tempter for her husband.
- He watched as Adam struggled with peer pressure and gave in.
- He looked for Adam and Eve in the garden that night and seen they were hiding. He seen they were now scared of Him and called out to them to please come and talk to Him anyway.
- He saw that they were now naked and killed a lamb to clothe them.
- He saw the first birth child of Adam and Eve.
- He seen that first born child murder his brother.
- He seen the insects start to bite and the roses grow thorns.
- He seen the animals start to eat each other and stalk the family He made.
- He saw Adam sweat.
- He saw the family grow and fight amongst themselves; they were many.
- He saw women raped and little children molested.
- He seen murder and swindling and every depravity that man could think of.
- He backed off His protection and watched the whole world become covered in water; all died except for eight who believed.
- He watched as earth's population grew again and became corrupt.
- He watched as a baby boy was born; this one was different; He was God too.
- He watched as the boy grew into manhood.
- He watched as the boy started telling others about Him. It was good news.
- He watched as the man healed the hurting.
- He watched as the man was hung on the cross and most people jeered; some cried.
- He watched as a few people later went out to tell others about His son; some people believed and were happy, some killed them.
- He watches as people tell about Him; some think He is kind; others make Him out to be mean.
- He watches as children are taught He doesn't exist and things evolved on their own.
- He watches as the earth produces food to eat.
- He watches as babies are conceived without a care and then removed from the womb and thrown in a dumpster without a thought.

- He sees those who are lonely and wants to talk to them.
- He watches as teens cut their bodies trying to feel that they may be alive.
- He watches a baby colt being born.
- He watches an American Idol snorting coke.
- He sees the flowers burst out from the covering of snow.
- He watches as little children are marketed on internet for sex.
- He sees a elephant protecting her new baby.
- He sees a car hit a semi-truck and all are killed.
- He sees someone give a homeless person food.
- He sees a hurricane destroy a city.
- He sees it all the good and the bad.

What we don't see:

- A God whose heart breaks with us.
- A God who loves us and has allowed us the freedom to choose.
- A God who laughs.
- A God who is relieved by anything good we do.

- A God who loves us even though we are scared, defiant or in denial of Him.
- A God who never wanted us to die.
- A God who wants to talk with you right now.
- A God who thinks you are awesome!
- A God who wants you to live forever with Him.

How will you choose?
